
Five Easy Ways to Make Reading a Habit for Your Child

924 words (2 sidebars)

Reading is the backbone of a child's education. This simple fact moved me to interview reading experts, and to write an article that would provide practical tools for parents to use, to make reading a habit in their child's life.

The Inside Story on Why We're Not Reading to Our Kids

1,593 words (2 sidebars)

I was stunned to read in a report by the National Center for Educational Statistics that, "only 53% of children ages 3 to 5 are read to daily by a family member." This simple fact moved me to interview the experts and compose this article. It promotes the importance of reading and gently breaks down the excuses parents often use to avoid reading to their children.

Top Tips to Make Bedtime Stories Come Alive

745 words (no sidebars)

We're told to read daily to our children, but the fact is, many parents don't! This article highlights suggestions from reading experts to "spice up" reading time, making it more enjoyable for everyone involved.

But He Can Read on His Own Why we still need to read to our readers!

1,091 words (1 sidebar)

Today's families spend more time in front of the TV than they do behind a book. This article interviews the reading experts and highlights the benefits of reading to older children, as well as the ideas that make it fun for everyone.

Get out the Vote! What kids need to know about elections

1,358 words (3 sidebars)

Presidential elections are the perfect time to nurture the informed and active citizen that lies in our children's future. This article talks with experts from PBS, Random House and Kids Voting USA, along with a psychologist and expert in tutoring to find out what kids can learn through the election process.
